Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 08 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and scattered showers, some heavy in east.

Today:
Rather cloudy in far north and north-west, whilst low cloud elsewhere clears, to allow sunny spells. This in turn in leading to showers developing, mainly in the south and east, with a risk of a few thunderstorms for eastern England.

Tonight:
Heavy showers fading, except over parts of eastern Scotland, with some light showers also in the far west. Else, clear spells and some mist, fog and low cloud developing.

Friday:
Good deal of cloud in the west with some showers. Sunnier and warmer further east, but with scattered heavy showers developing once again.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Persistent rain across the south early Saturday, followed by widespread showers, heavy and thundery in places, developing almost anywhere through the rest of the period. Temperatures near normal.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.